

Fly Your Flag in Antarctica Art Contest

Here's your chance to design a flag for an Antarctic Research Expedition! Winners will see their design turned into a flag flown from a research vessel in Antarctica. After the expedition, winners will receive the actual flag they designed that was flown in Antarctica!

How to Enter:

1) In the provided area, design and draw a flag that you think best represents Antarctic Research. You can decorate the flag with details about our expedition, what you think we might discover in East Antarctica or how the Antarctic impacts you and our world oceans. Feel free to visit www.polartrec.com for ideas.

A few suggestions:

- Keep the design simple
- Use two or three basic colors
- If you use words, make sure it's legible
- Make it your own unique design!

2) Submit your entry, with your name and a return mailing address, to:

Dominique Richardson
Cabrillo Marine Aquarium
3720 Stephen M White Drive
San Pedro, CA 90731

Or scan and email your design, with your name and return mailing address, to:
drichardson@polartrec.com

All entries must be received by February 1, 2015.

3) Follow my blog! Winners will be announced and photos of their flags being flown from the research vessel in Antarctic waters will be posted, on my journal at:

<http://www.polartrec.com/expeditions/antarctic-ice-stream-dynamics>

Five winning designs will be selected by members of the expedition team. The winning designs will be printed on cloth flags that will be flown from our research vessel in Antarctica. Winners will be announced during the expedition between April and May 2015 on the PolarTREC website. After the completion of the expedition, the flags that were flown in Antarctica (as well as other fun Antarctica goodies) will be mailed back to the winners, using their provided address. Unfortunately, we can't be responsible for lost or late mail. Please be sure to send us your correct address (address will only be used to notify winners)!

Thank you for joining me on my expedition to East Antarctica! I look forward to seeing your amazing designs!
