

Fly Your Flag in the Arctic Art Contest

Here's your chance to design a flag for an Arctic Research Expedition! Winners will see their design turned into a flag flown from a research site in Siberia, Russia. After the expedition, winners will receive the actual flag they designed that was flown in the Arctic!

How to Enter:

1) In the provided area, design and draw a flag that you think best represents Arctic Research. You can decorate the flag with details about our expedition, what you think we might discover in Siberia or how the Arctic impacts you and our world. Feel free to visit www.polartrec.com/expeditions for ideas.

A few suggestions:

- Keep the design simple
- Use two or three basic colors
- If you use words, make sure it's legible
- Make it your own unique design!

2) Submit your entry, with your name and a return mailing address, to:

Amanda Ruland
Saratoga Elementary School

Or scan and email your design, with your name and return mailing address, to:
aruland@polartrec.com

All entries must be received by May 15, 2019.

3) Follow my expedition! Winners will be announced and photos of their flags being flown from the research facility in Siberia will be posted, on my journal at:

<http://www.polartrec.com/expeditions/fire-and-carbon-in-siberian-forests>

The winning designs will be printed on cloth flags that will be flown from our research site. Winners will be announced prior to our June 15th expedition on the PolarTREC website. After the completion of the expedition, the flags that were flown in the Arctic will be mailed back to the winners, using their provided address.

Unfortunately, we can't be responsible for lost or late mail. Please be sure to send us your correct address (address will only be used to notify winners)!

Thank you for joining me on my expedition to Siberia! I look forward to seeing your amazing designs!
